ICO expert opinions

Vlas Lezin

I recently reviewed a yet undisclosed study where the public interest was measured against the price of major cryptocurrencies, clearly showing that the more people show interest in crypto, the higher the price is pushed. I would call this a “hype” pricing vs. other pricing models we see in the traditional assets.

I think that currently, crypto market lives through the final stages of this transformation where market participants are mainly focusing on value and underlying fundamentals and not on the hype. This is clearly indicated by lower volatility both long- and short- term.

It is good news for those who seek a more stable, more transparent and more value-driven investors. It is also good news for the market overall as higher stability brings more cautious and more traditional investors with larger capital.

The crypto-market is possibly more red & gory at present, than even George RR Martin could possibly infuse in Game of Thrones. Winter is here, much earlier than it can be depicted in GOT, having engulfed ICOs in a bear market. But as the saying goes every cloud has a silver lining and so has this Crypto-Winter. The withering of the ICO model as has done little in dampening the moods of the serious players, as more and more people are interested in knowing and applying the concept of decentralization in their business model; both as an instrument of fundraising and running of day to day affairs. As someone who has been closely associated with the blockchain industry, I perceive a turnaround in the sentiments with ICOs as well as STOs/ETOs, having proven business models, in the mid to late 2019.
